

St. Augustine wrote,

*“if you have received
the Eucharist properly, you yourselves are
what you have received.”*

As we celebrate the Diocesan Year of the Eucharist,
may we come to know
the meaning of St. Augustine’s words in our working lives.

Eucharist in the Workplace: Becoming What You Receive

Our Tradition cherishes a Eucharist that transcends weekend worship, and beckons to be with us at our workplaces.

Notions of “my Sunday Holy Communion” and “my job during the week” too often separate our Sunday Eucharistic experience from that of our work experience. The heart of Eucharist challenges us to unite the two.

Join us as we reflect on the ways in which our Sunday Eucharist and Monday work are really two sides of the same coin.

This interactive workshop will present practical connections between the images and language of Sunday liturgy and the places and tasks of our work lives.
